ISIL in Iraq: A disease or just the symptoms?
A public opinion analysis

Second wave

Munqith M. Dagher
IIACSS, Iraq
Methodology

• Nationwide poll (2000 interviews) on July 2014.

• 200 phone interviews in Mosul (controlled by ISIL) on 15\textsuperscript{th} June 2014.

• 500 flash F2F poll on 15\textsuperscript{th} of Sep 2014 in Sunni’s areas including those controlled by ISIL.

• In depth interviews with opinion leaders from areas controlled by ISIL.
It is a big mistake if we think that ISIL is a disease, It is really a symptom of the Real disease which is Sunni’s suffering and frustration since 2003. Actually ISIL has a deep contradiction with its Sunni incubator and here are the Evident:

Aspirin will hit the symptoms only, hit the disease

- Based on my long-standing work in Iraq and communications with many tribal figures and individuals associated with the previous regime, I am able to draw conclusion from anecdotal information, including frequent conversations with persons "on the ground" in ISIL-controlled areas such as Mosul, Anbar, Salahadin, and elsewhere.

- On the whole, my interlocutors are concerned about serious misunderstandings about what is happening in their areas of Iraq which could have serious implications for any actions taken by the Iraqi central government and outside powers. For instance:
• ISIL recruitment is on the rise as the ranks of its forces are now estimated at 30,000. Initial forces from early June were largely foreign-based, but now recruiting is on the rise, especially among rural, male youth from villages outside Mosul

  o Unemployment rate in Ninawa is more than 20%, in Rural areas it reach 30%.
  o Educational level in rural areas is much lower than the center (University graduate is 5% VS. 25% in the center of Mosul).
  o Income level in rural area is much lower also. For instance those who have income of more than $600 monthly in rural areas are 12% vs. 22% in Mosul center and those who have more than $800 monthly income in rural areas are 7% vs. 18% in the center.
  o In addition the center of Mosul has a long tradition of multi ethnicities and religious community.
There are several rationales that ISIL is using to drive this recruitment:

- First, there is the external threat of the Iraqi military and police forces of the Maliki government that were largely composed of Shi'a militias who broadly abused local populations over the last several years.
- Second, there is a strong and growing hatred of Iran and its involvement in these areas (Click Video).
- Third, there is a new, combined threat posed by the United States acting in concert with Iran. This is being communicated as a "new crusade" of Christians against Muslims.
Another basis of recruitment is theological, defense of Sunni values. Yet this is flawed on many levels. As indicated previously, Sunnis are, on the whole, significantly more secular than Shi'a. The destruction of mosques is one example of how ISIL are imposing their own version of religion that is not consistent with the practices and traditions of the region. More information about this needs to be disseminated.
• ISIL is anticipating airstrikes and aims to gain maximum advantage from these. Currently, ISIL is placing its flag on civilian centers to ensure maximum collateral damage from strikes, that will push public sentiment further to its side and generate even greater hatred of those behind the strikes.

• Airstrikes alone will be disastrous. A carefully-calibrated effort to win the hearts and mind of the people in this areas is critically important, yet there has been too little discussion of what this will involve. The fears of the people in these areas must be addressed and a better alternative to ISIL must be presented. There are a number of ways to communicate with people in these areas
• Most popular media sources in Sunni areas:

• The penetration rate of satellite TV. Set is 100% inside areas controlled by ISIL and around 90% said that their main source of info come from TV.

• There are around 42% of people living there have an access to the internet.
Thank you
